

TORNADOES HIT NORTHWEST; 5 DEAD

KING CAROL AND HELEN REUNITED

END OF REPUBLICAN FACTIONAL FIGHT IN COUNTY IS FORESEEN

Committee Places Not Contested In Coming
Primary

Friday the 13th may have been an unlucky day but it was a red letter day in the history of the Republican party's organization in Greene County.

For the first time in thirty years there will be no factional contest for places in the Greene County Republican Central Committee at the August 12 primary election, indicating that rival Republican groups have at last buried the hatchet.

The central committee will be almost evenly split between the two factions in order to avoid a contest at the primary and present a united front at the November election.

There will be twenty-four central committeemen to elect but of this number twenty-two places will be uncontested, it was revealed when the Republican list of committee candidates was filed with the board of elections Friday, the final day for filing petitions of candidacy.

It is true that there will be two contests over committee places, one in Beaver Creek Twp. and the other in Yellow Springs Village, but these are said to be purely local factional fights between individuals without the sponsorship of either of the two leading political groups.

D. H. Pittz, mayor of Yellow Springs and George A. Donley, son of Thomas Donley, former village mayor, are the rival central committee candidates in Yellow Springs. John H. Munzer and Lester J. Shoup furnish the contest in Beaver Creek Twp. which arises over township school board differences.

It is understood however, that it was mutually agreed by the rival groups that each faction would select its old committee members without opposition. The unopposed committee candidates are as follows:

J. B. Conklin, Xenia Twp.; F. C. Lackey, Ross Twp.; W. E. Crites, Spring Valley Vll.; James Laurens, Spring Valley Twp.; Harry A. Hager, New Jasper; A. B. Lewis, Jefferson Twp.; C. W. Moorman, Jamestown; S. W. Guyton, Xenia second ward; Everett A. Roberts, Xenia fourth ward; C. F. Snedkar, Fairfield; Walton Spahr, Sugar Creek Twp.; H. R. Armstrong, Bath Twp.; F. A. Kendig, Osborn; John Q. Ross, Silver Creek Twp.; George H. McDaniel, Xenia first ward; Joseph Adams, Xenia third ward; A. H. Creswell, Cedarville Twp.; Herbert C. Fisher, Bowersville; Ed. Meredith, Miami Twp.; H. M. Smith, Caesar Creek Twp.; W. W. Tate, Bellbrook; H. C. Lewis, Cedarville Vll.

Regardless of the winner of the local contests in Beaver Creek Twp. and Yellow Springs it will make no difference as far as factional control of the central committee is concerned as internal warfare is said to be now a thing of the past.

WALES INTERESTED IN GLIDING

LONDON, June 14.—Aviation's latest thrill—gliding—today had enlisted the Prince of Wales.

Gliding, to the tyro, means nothing but to the expert flyer, it means the some of all flying—riding the winds for a take-off and for a safe landing without anything to guide the glider but a construction of wing and tail surfaces.

The next king of England likes to fly and in his flying he's interested in aero dynamics—in a word, the prince is keenly interested in the final theory of why any airplane does fly, so he has taken up the hazardous sport of gliding.

Today, near Lewes, he spent some time in receiving instructions from Colonel Semper and from the Austrian record holder, Herr Kronfeld.

CAN'T BEAT SCOTCH!

CLEVELAND, June 14.—Because he bet on Jack Snarkey to win, Alex Thomas took a jump in the lake yesterday afternoon.

The bet was with Otto Gelthner, who came to Cleveland from Hamburg, Germany, just three years ago. Otto, of course, was betting on his fellow countryman, the new world's champion.

"Otto," Alex pleaded, before he took the plunge, "can I take off my socks?"

Otto grinned triumphantly and said "No."

Alex sighed and jumped. A short time later he strolled to the beach, pulled off his wet clothing and stood revealed in a green bathing suit.

The Scotch can't be beat.

There are two candidates for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination—former Congressman Geo. White, Marietta, and former State Representative Stephen M. Young, Cleveland Heights.

AMBULANCE BRINGS INJURED MAN HOME

SANDUSKY, O., June 14.—Hom-er Nell, 35, wealthy Sandusky manufacturer, is in a hospital here today suffering from injuries which he sustained in an automobile accident in Florida last winter.

Nell arrived here yesterday afternoon in an ambulance which brought him from Miami, Fla. He was accompanied by two men and two nurses. The ambulance left Wednesday night and traveled both day and night.

The man is suffering from a broken back and other serious injuries which have partially paralyzed him.

MAJOR SEGRAVE KILLED IN CRASH

Speedboat racing loses one of its most distinguished figures in the death of Major Sir Henry Segrave, Britain's racing king, who succumbed to injuries received when his speedboat, Miss England II, capsized during trial runs at Lake Windermere, England. He and his mechanic, M. J. Willcocks, were thrown clear

CONGRESS TURNS FROM TARIFF TO RIVERS AND HARBORS BILL

WASHINGTON, June 14.—The tariff bill virtually out of the way, administration leaders on Capitol Hill today planned the prompt enactment of the great rivers and harbors bill, passage of the American Legion's World War pension bill and the adjournment of congress by the end of this month.

The success of this program depended entirely on the senate's speed in passing the rivers and harbors bill, which authorized waterway projects in forty states and surveys in every state. Its total authorization has been variously estimated at from $136,500,000 to $300,000,000.

Until a date has been fixed for enactment of this bill, administration leaders will be unable to say when congress will adjourn.

The adjournment actually will affect only the house, releasing its membership for the summer campaigns. The senate will remain in Washington, since President Hoover is determined on ratification of the London naval treaty at a special session, immediately after adjournment of the regular session.

BRITAIN LAUNCHES PROBE OF FATAL SEGRAVE BOAT WRECK

WINDERMERE, Eng., June 14.—This scene of man's latest triumph over the elements was turned to one of grief and sadness today as an official investigation opened to determine the cause of the death of Major Sir Henry Segrave and his mechanic, A. V. Halliwell, killed when the speedboat Miss England II, capsized on Lake Windermere after breaking the world's record for speed on water.

Although the body of Halliwell, pinned in the cockpit when Miss England dove beneath the surface of the lake at a speed of more than 100 miles an hour, has not yet been recovered, an inquest was to be held this evening into the accident.

Speedboat experts and witnesses of the disaster are expected to testify in an effort to determine what caused the powerful speedboat to take its death dive. The craft lies in more than 100 feet of water at the bottom of the lake.

Lady Segrave, widow of the speed king, was prostrated by her husband's tragic death. She will be unable to appear at the inquest.

Sir Henry died several hours after the accident at a lakeside house where he was taken after being picked out of the water. His death was caused by a broken rib puncturing his lung.

Mourned throughout Great Britain Sir Henry was honored posthumously.

AKERS EXECUTED IN CHAIR AS PENALTY FOR MURDER CHARGE

Negro Youth Walks Calmly To Death At Ohio Pen

COLUMBUS, O., June 14.—Ohio's instrument of death, the electric chair at the Ohio State Penitentiary here today had once more taken a murderer into its yawning arms to catapult him into eternity. This time it was Lee Akers, 18, Cleveland Negro, who killed Franklin McCormack, filling station attendant, while robbing the station December 26, 1928.

Akers, calm, smilingly defiant, and with a firm tread, walked to his doom as though he were embarking on an adventure which he had been eagerly anticipating. A swagman was almost apparent as he stepped from the little room just ten paces to the right of the instrument and walked to the chair, without hesitation, and sat down. He seemed to take great interest in the manner in which he was being strapped into the thing which would take his life, pulling his lips now and then and glancing around the room at the small group of spectators.

The fatal current was turned on at 9:03 p. m. and the 18-year-old slayer was officially pronounced dead by Prison Physician George W. Mott at 9:06 p. m.

QUEEN RECONCILED TO ERRING HUSBAND AT REUNION DINNER

Queen Marie Given Credit For Making Peace In Family

BUCHAREST, June 14.—King Carol II and his queen, Helen, were reunited today, according to the newspaper Lupta.

Helen, who had just been declared Queen of Roumania, joined Carol, Dowager Queen Marie and others of the royal family at a reunion dinner at Cotroceni Palace last night.

Queen Marie, dowager queen of Roumania and mother of King Carol, was an instrumental character in effecting the reconciliation. She persuaded Helen that her place was at Carol's side to aid in the press of state affairs and in other concerns.

The "queen mother of the Balkans" succeeded in getting Carol and Helen together for conference at Cotroceni Palace and the two famous royal divorcees became one again.

Crown Prince Michael, once king regardless of the parliamentary rule put into effect which declared Carol "king in escrow" during the years of the latter's exile, was the binding tie that finally decided the reconciliation which Carol has sought since he became king after his coup a week ago.

The entire Roumanian nation was happy over the event. Despite Carol's armours, the populace always has adored the errant sovereign. His renunciation of Magda Lupescu, companion of his exiled years, was viewed as his first successful step in effecting the reconciliation with Helen.

Helen is an equally popular figure with the Roumanian people. Dr. Jules Maniu, peasant party leader, aided Carol in the affairs of state by drawing up and forming a coalition cabinet of which he was made premier by King Carol. Carol approved of his cabinet suggestions.

PARIS, June 14.—Mme. Magda Lupescu, auburn haired Roumanian beauty, for whom King Carol II renounced his rights to the throne and with whom he lived in exile for five years, was on her way to Bucharest today.

Accompanied by two Roumanian officers, apparently dispatched to France by King Carol, Mme. Lupescu left her "love chateau" at Bellemare, near Paris, in greatest secrecy.

Mme. Lupescu's journey is being made for the ostensible purpose of visiting the grave of her mother in Roumania. Latest reports from the Roumanian capital indicate she will return to Bucharest to find her former royal lover now reconciled with his wife, Princess Helen.

LOVERS MUST DIE TO PAY FOR MURDER

TOMS RIVER, N. J., June 14.—Mrs. Hattie Evans and Private Lester Underdown, U. S. M. C., today were found guilty of first degree murder and immediately sentenced to die in the electric chair for the death of Robert Evans, Mrs. Evans' husband.

Evans was killed in the Evans cottage at Lakehurst shortly after he was honorably discharged from the navy. Albert Duffy, a friend, was with him. Both men were shot and beaten to death.

The jury had been out since 8:30 last night.

Counsel for the defense was plainly shocked when the verdict was delivered without recommendation of mercy, making the death penalty mandatory.

NEW DISCOVERY AIDS RADIO

System Eliminates Other Congestion By Relieving Air Channels.

NEW YORK, June 14.—A radio discovery which may mean the transforming of the narrow congested ether cowpath into a broad highway was announced today.

Heralded as forecasting far-reaching results for the radio listener and the radio industry, successful trials of a means for operating two radio broadcasting stations on the same wave length have been accomplished by the Western Electric Company.

The system can be extended indefinitely, barring geographical obstacles, according to E. L. Nelson, radio development engineer, of the Bell Telephone laboratories.

"The system will eventually mean a great economic saving, an increased saving with more varied programs to radio listeners, and a clearing of congestion in the air," said Nelson.

Here are the children of Alfred "Jake" Lingle, veteran Chicago newspaperman, who was slain by a gunman because he "knew too much." Rewards for the capture of the killer now total $65,000. The Lingle children are Dolores, 5, and Alfred, Jr., 6.

PROBERS HEAR BLAME FOR DISASTER PLACED

Lack Of Lifeboats And S. O. S. Failure Are Cited As Causes

BOSTON, June 14.—Heavy loss of life in the Fairfax-Pinthis disaster today was blamed on the alleged absence of life boats and the alleged failure to call rescue craft by S. O. S. distress signals.

Captain Frederic A. Gower, port captain of the company that owned the oil tanker Pinthis, sunk last Tuesday night in a fog off Scituate at a cost of forty-six lives, was recalled to the witness stand today before federal steamboat inspectors and testified that the condition of the bodies of Captain Albert V. Jones and two of his men showed death by drowning.

He said that Dr. George Burgess Magrath, Boston's famous medical examiner, had also examined the bodies and declared emphatically that there were no burns and that death resulted from drowning. "I believe these three men and perhaps others of the Pinthis could have been saved had lifeboats been launched," said Captain Gower.

Federal probers of the collision faced two new and startling angles today.

One was whether the failure to flash the S. O. S. from the steamship when the antenna had been repaired, half an hour after the crash, cost the lives of at least eleven persons from the Fairfax and several others from the tanker.

The other was whether the coast-guard ashore and afloat, had been lax in duty because of evident inaction during the sea tragedy.

The extraordinary story of the disaster off Scituate in the dense fog of Tuesday night, as told to steamboat inspectors by the youthful quartermaster of the Fairfax, J. V. Eubank, slim, dark nervous Virginian, raised the first question. Eubank said that when he leaped into the sea with his clothing aflame, no lifeboats were lowered. Although a naval officer, with his baby strapped to his back and holding up his wife, and nine other persons were floating in the vicinity.

DARING BANDITS FLEE WITH $2,500

CLEVELAND, June 14.—Police were searching here today for two highway robbers who staged a daring holdup here yesterday afternoon and escaped with a $2,500 payroll.

The money was taken from the Hyman Epstein, treasurer of the Epstein Construction company, as he was driving from the bank to the company's office.

Epstein said his automobile was crowded to the curb by the bandit car. With drawn revolvers, the two robbers demanded the payroll and quickly escaped, Epstein told police.

SUICIDE VERDICT FOUND BY CORONER

CINCINNATI, O., June 14.—Suicide caused the death of Frank Stoffer, 74, retired cigar manufacturer of this city, whose body with two bullet holes in the head was found hanging in the basement of his home yesterday, police officials stated today.

Dispelling the murder theory which was expressed yesterday, police today believe Stoffer first attempted to end his life by firing two bullets into his head and later hanged himself when the bullets caused only slight wounds. A revolver was found in his pocket.

SCORES INJURED AS PART OF WISCONSIN AND MINNESOTA HIT

Menominee, Wis., Worst Hit; Heavy Property Damage

EAU CLAIRE, Wis., June 14.—Medical relief and supplies were rushed into the areas of western Wisconsin and southern Minnesota today where sporadic tornadoes last night struck at several points, taking a toll of five lives, injuring scores and exacting a property damage which may mount to a million dollars.

The most violent twister descended at Menominee, Wis., killed four persons and injured a dozen others, three perhaps fatally. Sweeping everything before it the violent wind smashed a wide path eastward as far as Eau Claire, Wis.

The dead at Menominee were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wolbert, Mrs. Carl Kaiser, and an unidentified man. The injured were Clarence Kaase, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Iverson, Raymond Wolbert, Mr. Kaiser, a Mrs. Payne and five others. All required medical attention. All those dead were killed at the Wolbert home when the twister wrung it from its foundation.

Boats at Pine Point, north of Menominee, were torn from the water and smashed against the trees on shore. The wind was preceded by a hail storm which, together with the wind, beat down crops and caused severe losses.

Twelve persons were injured here when the twister terminated its path of destruction by demolishing buildings in the ninth ward. The total damage here was estimated at $400,000. The abandoned sawmill of the Dells Lumber Company was demolished and a hotel roof was hurled against the Security State Bank.

A portion of the same disturbance tore its way across southern Minnesota, wrecking farms and dwellings as it went. One man was killed and several were seriously injured by the skipping twisters.

Several communities have sent appeals for medical aid and supplies. Torn telegraph and telephone wires made communication with the stricken area almost impossible and hindered relief work. Several buildings were blown down here. The Dells Lumber Company sawmill was demolished and the roof of the Beauregard Hotel was hurled against the Security State Bank. The property damage in this area was estimated at $400,000.

In southern Wisconsin a series of tornadoes did a similar property damage and one man was reported to have been killed. At least a dozen persons were treated for injuries. Calls for medical aid were received from several communities.

One tornado struck in St. Paul Park, a suburb of St. Paul, Minn., and leveled five homes there. Several farm buildings were likewise destroyed near Oslo and Brownsdale, Minn. Telephone and telegraph lines throughout the area were torn down and communication seriously hampered.

INDICT EMBEZZLER ON THREE CHARGES

CINCINNATI, O., June 14.—Armour W. Shafer, former district manager of the H. L. Doherty Co. of New York, whose alleged activity in the manipulation of checks forced the closing of the Cosmopolitan Bank and Trust Company, here this week, was under indictment today for the alleged embezzlement of $210,162.50 from the Doherty company.

Three counts were registered in the indictment which was returned by the Hamilton County grand jury. Two counts were for $100,000 each. The third was for $10,162.50.

Following the indictment, Shafer's bond was raised to $100,000. He previously had been at liberty under $15,000 bond.

In a statement today, bank examiners declared that Shafer's alleged speculations in check writing resulted in a shortage of $623,000 in the Doherty account at the Cincinnati bank.

SHARKEY SAYS MAX DESERVES TROPHY

BOSTON, June 14.—Jack Sharkey, disappointed but not bitter, was back home with his children today and was quoted as saying to interviewers that Max Schmeling should have his name placed on the Tunney-Muldoon trophy, emblematic of the world's heavyweight championship.

Jack was said to be disappointed over the outcome of his battle with the German but was quoted as saying that although Schmeling won on a technicality, he won just the same and should not be denied recognition.

COMMUNISTS TAKE CHINESE PORT TOWN

LONDON, June 14.—The port of Hwang-Shi-Kang, in the province of Hupeh, China, has been captured by a band of 2,000 Communists. It was reported in dispatches to the London evening newspapers today.

Three American and seven Belgian missionaries stationed in the town have taken refuge aboard a Japanese steamer in the harbor, the dispatches said.

BRITAIN LAUNCHES PROBE OF FATAL SEGRAVE ACCIDENT

ously by official recognition of his new speed record of 98.76 miles an hour for the two measured runs which preceded the accident.

Segrave had smashed the world's speedboat record by tearing over a measured course at 98.76 miles an hour for an average of two runs.

On this third attempt, Major Segrave opened wide the throttle on his boat—a hull with watchwork engines leaped forward with the propellers churning a more than 100-mile speed.

As the Miss England screamed down the course faster than any boat has ever traveled on the surface of water the engines suddenly ceased their staccato roar and a cloud of flame and smoke enveloped the craft, the boat swerved and capsized.

His Henry was rescued, his thigh and a rib fractured. A lung was punctured.

He rallied long enough to ask: "Have I broken the record?"

Then he lapsed and died in a Lake Shore residence with his wife, Lady Windermere, and three physicians standing by.

All Britain had lost the man who took the world's speed record for automobiles when he drove his special car along Daytona Beach, Fla., at more than 231 miles an hour.

PORT HURON, Mich., June 14.—Chris Smith, nationally known speedboat builder of Algoma, today laid the fate of Major Sir Henry Segrave, English speed king, to a defect in construction of his craft.

After studying pictures of the ship that carried Segrave on his death ride, Smith said: "It's position was wrong, it drove too hard on its forward plane. It should have been raised higher out of the water."

"The failure of that boat however, doesn't mean a thing so far as the ultimate construction of a 100-mile-per-hour boat is concerned. It can be and will be built."

LIBERTY BONDS

LAWYER OR HONEST MAN? NEW JUDGE CHOSE BOTH AS YOUTH

By MADELIN LEOP
Central Press Staff Writer
PHILADELPHIA, June 14.—Owen J. Roberts, new Supreme Court Justice refused to study law as a young boy until his teacher convinced him that it was possible to be both a lawyer and an honest man at the same time.

Born of well-to-do middle-class parents, his father, Josephus Roberts, a retired wagon manufacturer, and his mother, an old-fashioned lady who doted on her only son, young Owen went to school in Germantown, his birthplace. When he entered the Germantown Academy, it was his ambition to be a teacher. Dr. William Kershaw, who was then headmaster of the academy, learned of the boy's wishes, but he also saw his possibilities as an excellent debater. Dr. Kershaw himself persuaded young Roberts that it was possible to study law and remain honest. The youth was convinced and entered the University of Pennsylvania Law School, the same school which twenty-five years after his graduation conferred upon him an honorary degree because of his achievements in the service of his clients, of his law school, of his city and federal government.

Enjoys Farming

Next to his profession—Roberts has been a full professor, at the University of Pennsylvania, assistant district attorney, special deputy attorney general after the war, and of course most recently government counsel in the Dooney-Sinclair oil cases—the Supreme Court judge has one great avocation. He enjoys farming. From his early boyhood he has wanted to own and run a farm, and now that this ambition is satisfied, he likes nothing better than leaving his city home—a charming place in a quiet street in the heart of town where he has lived for the past fifteen years—and going out to Phoenixville, thirty-five miles away. Here he rides around on his spirited horse, overseeing what has been done while he has been in court arguing criminal cases, and giving all the various animals his personal attention.

"We have a 700-acre farm," Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, a quiet, smiling, extremely hospitable woman said, "where we spend at least two days a week the year round. This farm, called Bryn Cold, was originally six properties, but now we have made it all into one—a large rambling place, much of which is woodland. Of course we have a dairy herd on it. We have come here for the summer now. Our only daughter, Elizabeth, sailed for Europe recently, where she expects to stay for a few months and study music in which she is tremendously interested."

Likes Outdoor Life

Besides farming, Roberts enjoys roughing it in the outdoors. For nine years he and Mrs. Roberts have had a camp on the Pocono Lake preserve in the Pocono Mountains. There they spent their time canoeing—he learned to handle a canoe like an expert years ago when he was camping in Maine—and living in the outdoors.

As a husband and father, Owen Roberts has always been a model man. His wife calls him "a perfect darling, jolly and fun-loving about the house," and although at business his associates in his enormous law office say that he is very serious, works from 8:15 every morning until 6 every night—except on those evenings when he has to stay much later to finish an important legal matter—at home he acts as though he has not a care in the world.

In his thirty-two years of law practice, Mr. Roberts has never entered into politics. He has always been a member of the Republican party, but he has never cared to run for political office.

lengths for other purposes such as television.

"Besides furnishing better reception to the radio public it will give an opportunity for many millions of people to tune in on national broadcasting chain stations where before they were only able to have localized programs."

"National radio chains which have been working on approximately a total of eighty air channels will probably only need about five wave lengths."

Operation of the system involves an ingenious method of "monitoring" which is possibly only by reason of frequency stability.

At Marengo, Iowa, a point about midway of the 190 mile distance between the two transmitters, a radio receiver was installed and tuned to both stations.

The program is picked up and sent over a telephone line to Davenport where it is put on a loud speaker in the control room of station WOC.

Before the inauguration of this system, WOC and WHO shared a cleared channel, each station using the channel of alternate periods.

Under the proposed arrangement, authorization for which is being sought from the Federal Radio Commission, each station will operate during all broadcasting hours, transmitting a common program.

WHEREAS, this Commission has requested the City Auditor to issue his certificate as to the estimated life of the improvement to be constructed from the proceeds of the bonds herein after referred to and of the notes to be issued in anticipation of such bonds, and the City Auditor has certified to his Commission such estimated life as exceeding five (5) years, and has further certified the maximum maturity of such bonds as ten (10) years, and such notes as two (2) years.

NOW, THEREFORE, be it ordained by the City Commission of the City of Xenia, State of Ohio:

SECTION 1. That it is deemed necessary to issue bonds of the City of Xenia in the principal sum of fifteen hundred dollars, ($1,500.00), in order to provide a fund for the purpose of constructing a main sanitary sewer from the existing sewer running between King and Detroit Streets North to the proposed site of the armory in Block No. 7 of Dodds' Second Addition to said City.

SECTION 2. That said bonds of the City of Xenia shall be issued in said principal sum of fifteen hundred dollars, ($1,500.00), for the purpose aforesaid. Said bonds shall be of the denomination of five hundred dollars, ($500.00), and shall be dated October 1, 1930; shall bear interest at the rate of five (5%) per centum per annum, payable semi-annually on the first day of April and the first day of October of each year until the principal sum is paid, and shall mature in their consecutive serial order as follows: five hundred dollars, ($500.00), on October 1st in each of the years from 1931 to 1933, both inclusive, which maturities are hereby determined to be in substantially equal annual installments.

SECTION 3. That it is necessary and this Commission hereby determines that notes shall be issued in anticipation of the issue of said bonds.

SECTION 4. That such anticipatory notes in the amount of fifteen hundred dollars, ($1,500.00), which sum does not exceed the amount of the bond issue, shall be issued bearing interest at the rate of six (6%) per centum per annum, payable semi-annually. Such notes shall be dated on the 1st day of July, 1930, and shall mature on the 1st day of July, 1932. Provided, however, that such notes shall be redeemable at any interest period. Such notes shall be executed and delivered in such a number and such denominations as may be requested by the purchaser of such notes.

SECTION 5. Such notes shall be executed by the Mayor and City Auditor, and bear the seal of the corporation; shall be designated "Armory Sewer Extension Notes", and shall be payable at the Xenia National Bank, in the City of Xenia, Ohio; they shall express upon their face the purpose for which they are issued, and that they are issued pursuant to this ordinance.

SECTION 6. Said notes shall be first offered to the Sinking Fund Trustees of the City and so many of the same as shall not be taken by said Trustees shall be sold at private sale by the City Auditor but for not less than par and accrued interest, and the proceeds from such sale, except any premium and accrued interest thereon, and the amount thereof necessary for the payment of interest prior to the maturity of such notes shall be paid into the proper fund and used for the purpose aforesaid, and for no other purpose. SECTION 8. During the year or years while such notes run there shall be levied on all the taxable property in the City of Xenia, in addition to all other taxes, a direct tax annually, not less than that which would have been levied if bonds had been issued without the prior issue of such notes. Said tax shall be and is hereby ordered computed, certified, levied, and extended upon the tax duplicate, and collected by the same officers, in the same manner, and at the same time that taxes for general purposes for each of said years are certified, extended and collected. "BLIND BILLY" IS

DEAD; LIFE-LONG INFIRMARY INMATE

They are making funeral arrangements today for William Bell, 63, familiarly known to hundreds of Greene County as "Blind Billy" to whom death came Saturday morning at 5:30 o'clock at the County Infirmary.

The infirmary was the only home "Billy" ever knew. The Great Civil War was still a poignant memory on September 21, 1867, when "Billy," then an infant less than a year old, came to the institution. Since then it has been his home and protector and its officials over the years have been his parents, his friends and his counselors. Now death has taken "Billy," it will be the place of his funeral rites.

"Billy" was a healthy infant that day his mother tucked him in a basket and abandoned him to an unknown fate. But she neglected to place him in the shade and the hot sun, burning into his eyes for a long time, blistered them so that ever since that "Billy" had been blind. It was then they took him to the infirmary and the county and its officials took the place of the mother who had deserted him.

Smiling in the face of this adversity, "Blind Billy" developed a philosophy that made him beloved of his fellow inmates and the officials who came and went during the years he made the infirmary his home. Overcoming the handicap of blindness, he developed a native talent for music and became an accomplished performer on the harp, piano, organ and accordion.

He used this talent to entertain his fellow inmates, bringing cheer into the drab circles of institution life and frequently came to Xenia to appear on church programs.

Through his friend Charles Williams, a fellow inmate, "Blind Billy" became familiar with the Bible, his friend reading the Scriptural passages until "Billy" could recite them word for word. Thus he became a student of the Scriptures.

But death culminated a long illness for "Billy" Saturday and the entire infirmary mourns his passing. Funeral services will be held at the infirmary Chapel Monday morning at 10:30 o'clock and the friends he made at the institution will gather at his bier to say their last farewell. Burial will be made at the Need Funeral Home, W. Market St.

CONTESTS FEATURE PRIMARY; THREE OUT FOR REPRESENTATIVE

The August 12 primary election, from the standpoint of the Republican party, will be anything but a listless affair as spirited contest of a number of candidates makes for every office except county coroner.

Braving the possible hoodoo of the doubly unlucky day, Friday the 13th, when the time for filing nominating petitions expired at 6:30 p. m., the "eleventh hour" entry of a number of candidates makes certain warm competition for nominations on the Republican ticket and nomination is equivalent to election in this county.

The Democratic party did not bother to file a slate of candidates for the primary although a full Democratic ticket is promised for the November election. Principal interest will be attached to the three-cornered contest over the nomination for Green County's representative in the state legislature.

Representative R. D. Williamson, seeking his fourth term, will be opposed by two candidates. Mrs. Carrie L. Flater, president of the Greene County Women's Christian Temperance Union, and Fred M. Ervin, in the feed and grain business in Xenia with his father, C. H. Ervin, are his rival candidates for the nomination.

Representative Williamson, one of the state's agricultural leaders, was a former member of the state board of control and the state board of agriculture and two years ago was chairman of the house finance committee. At present he is serving on that committee for the third time.

Paul H. Creswell, serving an appointive term as county auditor, and a candidate for his first elective term of office, will have unexpected opposition from George H. Eckerle, of the Eckerle Printing Co., who filed his petition Friday, as did Creswell, whose petition contained approximately 1,300 signatures, more than any other candidate.

Because he is serving an appointive term, Creswell filed for both the short term and long term as auditor. The law specifies that unless an appointment to fill a vacancy is made within thirty days in advance of an election, there must be a short and long term. The short term ends in March when the term to which former Auditor R. O. Wead was elected, expires. Eckerle did not file for the short term.

R. O. Copey, former Xenia Twp. justice of the peace, filed his petition Friday seeking the nomination for county treasurer in opposition to the candidacy of Harold M. Van Pelt, who has served as chief deputy treasurer for four years.

J. Carl Marshall will not again seek the office of prosecuting attorney which he has held for three terms, leaving the field to Attorney Marcus McCallister and James P. Kyle.

George F. Sugden, chief deputy under Sheriff Ohmer Tate, is a candidate to succeed his chief in that office and he will be opposed at the primary by John Baughn, Jamestown, former chief deputy sheriff under former Sheriff Morris Sharp.

The fight for the one vacancy on the board of county commissioners will also be a three-way affair. Herman W. Eavey, incumbent, whose term expires, John A. North, Xenia plumbing contractor and former commissioner, and C. A. Jacobs, Dayton Pike, are the three candidates.

County Recorder B. F. Thomas will be opposed for re-nomination by Leroy Wolf, Xenia, former Pennsylvania Railroad engineer.

Dr. R. L. Haines, Jamestown, candidate for county coroner, is the only office seeker without opposition. Since he is also serving out an appointive term he filed for a short as well as a long term for the office. He formerly served as coroner for ten years.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

GLORY IN THE LORD—But he that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord. For not he that commendeth himself is approved, but whom the Lord commendeth.—2 Cor. 10:17, 18.

MORE CONFUSION

The position of the foreign diplomatic corps in China is unenviable. Since the rise of the Nanking oligarchy it has been necessary for the diplomatic representatives of the other powers to spend a good deal of time down on the Yangtze. The legation buildings still hug the south wall of the Tartar city at Peking, where they were assembled after the boxer trouble; but the seat of the only government China now has is hundreds of miles away.

The principal treaty powers have recognized the Nanking government. Consequently their diplomatic relations with China are conducted with it. The resulting situation is unique. As a rule diplomatic missions are located in the de facto capital of the country to which they are accredited. They are supposed to be "near the person" of the sovereign. They are so far away from that person in China today that their expense accounts must cost their governments a pretty penny.

With the rise of General Yen Hsi-hsiang and the threat of a divided China, with a new government at Peking, another complication develops. The foreign missions hesitate to remain in the old capital lest they become involved with the northern coalition, whose claim to power has not yet been recognized by their governments. They are reported to be trickling down to Nanking; or to Shanghai, a nearby port, where living conditions are more to the liking of westerners.

The uncertainty surrounding the whereabouts of the foreign diplomats in China merely illustrates the general condition existing in that country. All is turmoil. Chiang Kai-shek says he will protect foreigners in his area. General Yen says he will protect them in his. They will do their best to keep their words, as Chinese leaders always have, with respect to foreigners; but their ability to do so effectively is questionable. Under such conditions, what a travesty upon reason was the Nanking regime's proclamation of December 28, 1929, abolishing extraterritoriality!

PRODIGAL RETURNS

The prodigal has returned to Rumania. The sower of wild oats in the capitals of Europe has come home to claim the birthright he tossed away in 1925 for the love of a titian-haired sweetheart. An indulgent mother, after the fashion of mothers from the beginning of time, wires her satisfaction at the reception accorded him.

That reception may be a good omen for Rumania. Things haven't been going so well there as they might have. A condition of uncertainty has prevailed ever since Carol abdicated in favor of his infant son. The possibility that he would come back and claim the throne has hung like a cloud over Rumanian politics. The reinstatement of Carol would clear up the situation for a people that obviously is still kindly-minded. Carol has always said that he would never accept the crown unless there was sufficient popular demand for his return to guarantee that it would be effected without bloodshed. That is in his favor. A king who does not like to see his people hurt each other is likely to rule with a gentle hand. Anyway, as far as Rumania is concerned whoever sits on the throne will have little to say. The peasants have seen to that.

We are sorry for Helen, if it is true that her divorce from Carol is to be annulled. We are not particularly sorry for Mihai, who seems to be a headstrong little chap, with no other conception of the royal prerogative than to beat up schoolmates who dare not hit back at a king. The deferment of his substantive occupation of the throne will not do his outlook on life any harm. We hope for Rumania's sake that the opera bouffe of its royal drama is really ending so happily. Anthony Hope died too soon.

The WAY of the WORLD

By GROVE PATTERSON

AS TO KEEPING FIT

One learns that Secretary of State Stimson kept himself physically fit during the London conference by swinging Indian clubs. One also remembers that when the elder Chamberlain, great British statesman, was asked how he accounted for his long life he said: "I never walk when I can ride, and of two cigars I always smoke the stronger."

Chauncey Depew, who lived blithely to be 92 or 93, also had some ideas about keeping fit. Asked once if he exercised, he said: "No, I keep fit by acting as pall bearer for my friend who do."

Well, there's no general rule about anything. Living is a fine art and one must do the best he can at it. Some will do it one way and some another. Stimson with his Indian clubs may be just as right as the elder Chamberlain with his horse and buggy. It all depends on the man.

WOMEN'S INTERESTS

Some writer is trying to make us believe that American women are less well informed and more limited in their interests than women in Europe. It would be hard to make any American man believe that. American women are engaged in clubs, organizations and public affairs that reach around the world and last all the way from breakfast to midnight.

THAT'S NOT INFERIORITY

And now we learn from the Baltimore Sun that "an inferiority complex is the sort of thing that makes you turn off the radio to keep from waking the baby next door, while it prevents you from complaining of the baby next door waking you by crying in the night because babies have a right to cry."

"It is the sort of thing that makes you rush to return a book you have borrowed, while it makes you hesitate to ask for the book that somebody has borrowed from you."

"It is the sort of thing that leads you to spank your dog for barking at the neighbor's cat, but prevents you from driving the neighbor's chickens from your flower garden on the ground that your neighbor may be offended and, after all, it is impossible for chickens to know that they are trespassing."

"An inferiority complex is what prevents you from asking for a job which you would like to hold because it does not seem quite proper to seek it, and, at the same time, leads you to admire the man who lands the job for having the nerve to ask for it."

"It is what keeps you from inviting people to dinner at the last minute on the ground that it is impolite while accepting such late invitations yourself on the assumption that no discourtesy is meant."

Well, the facts are that this kind of behavior indicates something very much better than an inferiority complex. Indeed, if you have these reactions—the desire to be courteous and a superiority to insult—you are not an inferior person. You are a superior one. You have a serenity which the inferior can never have.

Would a person jumping from an airplane several thousand feet up become unconscious before reaching the ground if the parachute failed to open?

The popular belief that a person falling from a great altitude will be killed or rendered unconscious before reaching the ground has been exploded by army flyers, says the war department. The army air corps experimental department at Wright Field can definitely state that a man falling from any altitude with a parachute pack attached never attains a velocity of greater than 118 miles per hour and does not lose consciousness. A dummy of the size and weight of a 180-pound man, with a service parachute attached and unopened, attained, it was found, a velocity of 118 miles per hour within a period of eleven seconds, and after falling 1,200 feet in the quiet air, but from that time on no increase in speed was attained.

Overruling the President How can a bill vetoed by the president be passed over his veto? This can be done by securing a two-thirds majority in both houses of congress in favor of the bill.

United States Mints Where are the United States mints situated?

The mints are at Philadelphia, San Francisco and Denver. The New Orleans and Carson City (Nev.) mints are conducted as assay offices are situated also at New York City, Boise, Idaho; Helena, Montana; Seattle, Wash., and Salt Lake City, Utah.

Fever Temperatures What is regarded as the highest temperature a sick person can have and live?

When the temperature reaches 106 degrees in man the term hyperpyrexia (excessive fever) is applied. The patient's condition is regarded as serious, and if the temperature exceeds 107 to 108 degrees death results except in some cases of sun or heatstroke. Occasionally, just before death, the temperature will rise to 110 to 112 degrees.

The Rockefeller's Where does the name Rockefeller originate?

The Rockefeller family association says that the name Rockefeller is originally from the French Roquefeuille, meaning, literally, rock leaf. The ancestral home of the family is the Chateau Roquefeuille, in France, in the town of Creysseilles. It was so named because the rocks in that vicinity show a peculiar leaf formation which is the result of petrification. A branch of the family comes from the Palatinate.

Bo-Broadway

By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE

EASY GO NEW YORK CITY, New York — Rex Fairbanks, playboy of Broadway, reputed to have spent $500,000 with the gimme-girls of Mazda Lane in the time it would take to say Aunt Tabitha, and who was then compelled to live on $35 a week for the last five years, is in the pink again.

Rex has a million and a half now to play around with and the usual crowd is on deck to help him skip rope, or whatever, it is you do when you have a million and a half.

But there is a little complication. Margaret Moran, former circus belle, has turned up and says she is Mrs. Fairbanks, but is quite willing to forget it for $500,000.

Somehow or other, Rex says he has no recollection of having a wife.

NO BID Jed Harris is back from London and says the London theatre "isn't worth a dime of anybody's money." The producer of "Broadway" and other hits didn't make any bid for the New York stage.

HONOR THY FATHER There is a blind Broadway news-dealer with two worthless sons. The older man managed to save $6,000, which he hid in his home. The other night when they thought he was asleep, the father heard the boys plotting to find the money.

They live out of the city near Bay. The next day the older man came out with a bundle under his arm and asked the boys to take him for a row. As they pushed off, he told them to go out to the channel and let him know when they were there.

Smelling a rat, the boys rowed to a spot where there was a foot of two of water and reported they were in the channel. Without a word the older man heaved the bundle he was carrying into the water.

The boys jumped in and found the $6,000. Rather than have it go to his sons, the father had decided

CRITICS SEE U. S. NAVY DWINDLING

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON—There is something to be said for a scheme of Senator Lynn J. Frazier in comparison with the London naval treaty which the senate is being urged by President Hoover to ratify in a hurry.

The North Dakota senator proposes an amendment making warfare unconstitutional.

It sounds ridiculous on the face of it. How can we make any other country pay any attention to our constitutional amendment? All the same, if we adopt it and follow it up by scrapping our whole national fighting machine, ashore and afloat, at least it will be a consistent performance—ultra-pacificist but it will hang together.

Which is more than can be claimed for—An armament limitation agreement guaranteed to give us parity with the British if we spend a billion building a type of ships our navy has no use for—with the option of sinking into third place among the world's sea powers—despite the fact that equally with the greatest of them, while saying a lot of money, is what our diplomats have been promising to us.

THERE is no joker in Senator Frazier's idea, anyway.

Quite a sizable one is concealed in the treaty brought back from London by Secretaries of State and the Navy Stimson and Adams, Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow and Senators David A. Reed and Joe Robinson—if there is anything jocular about a solid brass ingot encased in one thin layer of goldleaf, slightly peeled in places, where sundry critics have picked at it.

Nevertheless, it was an artistic job originally. It was so clever that even the most skeptical senators, like Hiram W. Johnson of California, hardly knew what to make of it at first. Considerable expert testimony was required to enlighten them. The experts finally accomplished it, however.

BOGUS though this thing may be, all indications are that the senate, unless strenuous opposition is made, will accept it.

It is an administration offering; that's one consideration. President administration senators, and senators who prefer not to admit that they are anti-administration, will not like to vote against it. The notion has been thoroughly advertised that at least it checks armament growth; pro-peace senators, therefore, will hesitate to fight it. Senator Joe Robinson, as Democratic leader, will keep most of the Jeffersonian brethren in line—having himself been associated in the London negotiations.

SENATORS who will vote for the treaty, yet are critical, probably will say that ratification of the treaty won't make such a tremendous difference to the United States.

Uncle Sam's delegates were to get rid of it, only to play right into their hands.

The story might never have been known, but the boys are boasting about it.

THEN THEY'LL SUIE!

The pupil had handed in his composition with a long string of dots and dashes at the end of it. "What are those marks for?" asked the teacher.

"Oh, those are the punctuation marks. Put them in to suit yourself."

horn-swaggled at London certainly, they'll add, but it has been evident for quite awhile that America is going to fall farther and farther behind as a maritime nation, regardless of agreements; in fact, it has been doing so for 10 years already.

If we really were likely to invest a billion (as this compact permits but does not require) in cruisers of a useless pattern, for our purposes, it would be a serious matter—but we simply shall let our navy dwindle, which is what we should do whether or no; so we are no worse off because the British out-marted us.

THE JAPANESE were open and above board at London. They had had a 5-5-3 ratio (5 for the U. S., 5 for the British and 3 for Japan) and they wanted to bring themselves up to a 10-10-7 alliance and said so and fought for that rating, got it, too, though they do not seem to be satisfied with it. Judging from the way they are committing hari-kari out of sheer mortification at what they appear to consider their failure.

The French and Italians were so candid and cynical that they kicked over the traces and refused to sign the compact. But—say the critics—the kind of parity Uncle Sam gets with the British under the treaty is in ships of little value to us but of great value to Great Britain. They're ships suited for a great power with many naval bases, but not for the United States, with few bases.

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

"DEAR MISS LEE: I don't suppose this would go in your column, but I don't know what to get my boy friend for his birthday. His mother suggested that I get him a shirt. Do you think that this would be correct? I have been going with him for a long time and he has given me some very nice presents, and I feel that this is hardly good enough. What suggestions have you to make?"

"BESSIE M. M." There are shirts and shirts, Beesie. A silk shirt, the kind that he would hardly buy for himself, would be a very nice present, as long as you have gone together so long, and it was his mother that suggested it. Other things, possibly less personal, are: silver belt buckle, set of books, tennis racket, golf sticks, if he plays; sweater and golf shoes, stationery with his name, pen and pencil set, book-ends, the pin, lounging robe, smoking jacket, blazer, box of initialed handkerchiefs, cigarette lighter or case, pocketbook, etc.

HARD WORKING WIFE AND MOTHER: I see no reason why you should continue to live with your husband, as long as you have to work so hard and earn so much of the living, anyway. You don't love him, you say, and only get abuse from him, and he openly tells you he doesn't care for you. Why not sue for divorce, if your children are grown, and make your own way in peace?"

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I am a young man not quite 20. I am now, and have been for over three years, in love with a girl several years my junior. Have never made any confession of love to her whatever, and she is so young. I know I love her and always will, and I am sure she thinks quite well of me, but I don't know whether she loves me or not. "What I want to know is this: Would you tell her you loved her and find out your exact position in her feelings, or would you continue to play the part of a silent lover? Please tell me exactly what course you would take."

"SILENT ADMIRER" If the girl is old enough for you to care for her so steadfastly for three years, it would seem that she is old enough for you to tell that you care for her, Admirer. Have you her parents' approval? You will be of age in a year, and may begin to plan soon after that for your future, and it would make a difference with your plans and hopes if you knew you could include her in them. I wish you luck.

BUBBLES: I think the girl was very rude to go out when she had invited you to her home. She was certainly the one at fault and she showed a poor spirit in not answering your letter. I don't know what more you can do to restore the friendship, but don't hold a grudge even now. If she shows a tendency to make up, meet her half way, although you can hardly be expected to feel the same toward her as you did before.

BEE: Sorry to keep you waiting for an answer, Bee. I wouldn't call the new boy friend up, and I don't believe it would be wise to make up with the former, as you are not at all sure you care for him. It would hardly be fair to him, you see, to raise his hopes and then have to send him away because you didn't care enough. I think other boys will ask you for dates after a while and you had better accept them, and she is so young. I may forget this one who has acted so strange."

How To Achieve Beauty

By GLAYS GLAD

"Dear Miss Glad: You have given such excellent advice to others of your readers, that I thought I would come to you with my problem. My hands are very ugly. They're so wrinkled and scrawny looking. Is there any possible means of improving their appearance?"

FLO U. Exercise will build up starved tissues and keep the hands from acquiring that skinny, ugly appearance that so many older women's hands have. The following exercises are excellent for this purpose:
1. Using the left hand, push the fingers of the right hand as far back as you can. Reverse.
2. With each finger pointing straight ahead, describe circles in the air with first the thumb, then the forefinger, etc. Do not use the oil on the lower part of the heel. To put oil on the heels or on the toes is to soften the skin so much that the feet become very sensitive to any shoe or stocking irritation, and serious foot infections may result.

"Dear Miss Glad: Thanks to the reducing instructions contained in your booklet on 'The New Figure,' I have reduced to my correct weight. However, it just seems natural for me to gain. How can I keep my present weight?"

"MRS. QUINN." If you want to keep your present weight, and you have a tendency to obesity, select one day out of every seven to imbibe nothing but liquids, such as tea, coffee, water, orange juice, grapefruit, buttermilk and, if you feel faint, an apple or two. One liquid day each week will do wonders to keep your weight down.

"Dear Miss Glad: For quite some time I have been wearing strapless pumps. Recently I noticed that hard bumps or callouses were forming on my heels. How can I prevent this?"

"W. CLAIRE." The continual rubbing of the tops of slippers against the heels causes an accumulation of skin just above the slipper line. In some cases where the feet are neglected, the skin gets so hard and heavy that it is almost a callous.

The use of a bath brush daily on the heel while in the bath will soften the skin and keep the heel from this condition. A little olive oil applied two or three times a week to the heel at this spot also is effective. Do not use the olive oil on the lower part of the heel. To put oil on the heels or on the toes is to soften the skin so much that the feet become very sensitive to any shoe or stocking irritation, and serious foot infections may result.

EDITOR'S NOTE: While it is impossible for Miss Glad to answer beauty questions by mail, she will be happy to send you her pamphlets on "The New Figure" and "Beauty Culture" if you will write her, care of this paper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope and 10 cents in coin, for each, to cover cost of printing and mailing. Beauty questions on beauty will be answered through Miss Glad's daily column.

SPORT SNAP SHOTS FRAMED by Phil

That widely hallyhood bout between Jack Sharkey and Max Schmeling for the "heavyweight supremacy of the world" was certainly a travesty on the boxing sport. The "fight" ended in the last few seconds of the fourth round when Sharkey, who had been administering a thorough drubbing to the Herr Maxie, floored his German opponent with a low blow and was declared the loser on a foul. As a result Schmeling is technically the heavyweight champion of the universe but it is a hollow honor for him.

You would have thought that Sharkey learned a lesson from his scrap with Jack Dempsey a few years ago when he hit the Manasa Mauler a low blow which cost him a chance to meet Gene Tunney for the title. But no, the Boston mob did not profit by this experience and still goes around smacking foul blows just when the coveted title is almost within his grasp. They say that experience is the best teacher but this boy Sharkey must be a dumb pupil. Even experience failed to teach him anything.

There is little doubt in the minds of most people but that Sharkey is a better fighter than Maxie and would probably have put him away in a few rounds the other night but he appears to have a "foul blow complex."

Whether the Kiwanis-Rotary softball team knows it or not, it picked up an old-time baseball player the other day in Verdun Moll, this city who played shortstop in the Ki-Ro nine's last game. Moll used to play in the old Central League with Chillicothe and although "kitten ball" is new to him his former baseball experience should stand him in good stead and he will undoubtedly accustom himself rapidly to this popular pastime. Moll is connected with the Red Wing Ice Cream Co. here as manager.

Manager Jess Chambliss, of the Xenia Merchants, semi-pro baseball team, thinks that "Jug" Conley, erstwhile second baseman and field captain of the local team, may yet return to the Merchants before the season is over. Conley, who has been playing regularly for the local team for the last several seasons on Sundays, severed his connection with the Merchants a few weeks ago on the promise of a berth with the American Railway Express team of Dayton, but has not yet found an opportunity to break into the regular lineup, according to Chambliss.

George Servis, of the well known Dayton Servis restaurant, was speaking the other day of the golfing prowess of his son, Bobby, who is only 15 years old. When George learned that the luck of the draw had paired Bobby with Johnny Florio, state champion, in the opening round of the Central Ohio District amateur golf tournament at Springfield Thursday, George was more elated than downcast.

George argued that if Bobby could beat Florio he would gain state-wide recognition, whereas if he was matched with a comparatively unknown golfer it would make little difference to anyone, except Bobby himself whether he won or lost.

As it turned out the sensational youngster carried Florio to the eighteenth green before he lost to the state champion, one up, and it took a remarkable shot from off the bank behind the eighteenth green to stop Bobby from taking the last hole and evening the match. Bobby, probably a little nervous, missed an eight-foot putt for the birdie three which would have won the hole for him and squared the match.

The annual public concert of the O. S. and S. O. Home Cadet Band, sponsored by Foody Post, American Legion and announced for June 27, has been postponed until June 30.

The change in date was announced by the Legion after it learned the earlier date conflicted with the annual Chautauque program here. The concert will be held in the pavilion of Shawnee Park where seating arrangements will be provided by the Legion.

LANGS EVEN SERIES WITH SPRINGFIELD IN FAST ENCOUNTER

Victory Here Gives Real Exhibition Of Kitten Ball

How the "kitten ball" sport should be played in Xenia was demonstrated to a queen's taste by the Lang Chevrolet Co. nine and the International Harvester Co. team of Springfield in an exhibition softball game on the Washington Park diamond Friday night.

In a game that was unique in several respects, notably that there was no umpire batting and the fact the contest was played in the record-breaking time of forty-seven minutes, the Lang Chevrolets, co-leader of the Xenia National League, defeated the visiting nine, 8 to 7.

Victory came in the last half of the ninth inning when a double by Joe Smittle and a triple by D. Fuller scored the winning run before a single batter had been retired in the round.

Langs had previously been defeated by the Harvester team at Springfield a few weeks ago, 7 to 6.

The Springfield boys, who are used to playing with an inside seam ball and with the bases sixty feet apart, did not appear handicapped by the fact the return game was played under local softball regulations with the bases only forty-five feet distant from each other. They also handled the unfamiliar outside seam ball with a dexterity which was amazing in view of the fact this type of ball is considered most difficult to handle.

There is not much doubt but that the game in every respect was the best exhibition of the current season and was featured by fast fielding on both sides, particularly by the outfielders.

Langs got away to a one-run lead in the first inning on Smittle's double, a sacrifice fly by D. Fuller and a double by Ruse, but Springfield uncorked a four-run rally in the third on an error, a single by Broadbeck, a double by Young, J. Fisher's single and a two-bagger by W. Fisher.

Langs duplicated this rally with a four-run scoring spree of their own in the last of the third as a result of Shaw's single, a long home run by the slugger Smittle, an error, single by Ruse and Cain's sacrifice fly. An error and Smittle's single gave the Xenia nine another marker in the fourth.

Taylor's single and J. Fisher's home run to left field enabled Springfield to even the count in the first of the seventh but Langs again went ahead in the last half of this stanza on a double by Ruse and L. Fuller's single. A circuit blow by W. Hays with the bases empty tied up the score in the eighth and Langs won out in the ninth.

Joe Smittle, with a home run, two doubles and a single led the Lang hitting. Ruse, third baseman, contributed three hits and fielded sensationally. He had one putout and nine assists at the hot corner. The Fuller brothers in the outfield, with ten putouts between them, also made several stunning catches. The batting and fly-catching of J. Fisher, Springfield center fielder, was outstanding. Fisher made three hits including a homer, double and single, and snared no fewer than eight flies that came his way.

Hits were evenly divided between the two teams as each side got eleven. Williams pitched for Langs and Broadbeck hurried for Springfield.

An unusually large crowd witnessed the game and announcement was made that the "rub" game between the two teams will be played off at Springfield July 2. Box score:

SHOEMAKERS OVERCOME EIGHT RUN LEAD TO DEFEAT SOLDIERS

An eight-run lead collapsed entirely for Company L's softball team and the Krippendorf-Dittman Co. nine once again regained the undisputed leadership of the American League by defeating the National Guard unit, 18 to 12 at Cox Athletic Field Friday night.

Company L gave indications at the start of the contest that it was out to register its initial victory of the season by scoring four runs in the first inning, another in the second and three in the third.

The huge advantage failed to stand up, however, and Krippendorf quickly evened the count with a two-run spurge in the third and a six run spurge in the fourth. In the fifth Krippendorf gathered six more markers and added three in

AMERICAN LEGION JUNIORS TO PLAY BELLBROOK TEAM SUNDAY

Xenia's junior American Legion baseball team will stack up against the Bellbrook "Pirates" in a non-league game Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock on the Kilkare Park diamond.

The Xenia juniors have a record of two victories and two defeats in four games played to date and are hoping to inaugurate a winning streak.

The Bellbrook nine, composed of high school boys, is undefeated and there is every indication that a close game is in prospect.

The local juniors play all their home games at Kilkare Park and all Legionnaires are urged to turn out and "root" for the team they are sponsoring this summer.

The Xenia juniors will present the following lineup for Sunday's contest: Glenn, catching; Anderson, Batson or Chambliss, pitching; Compton, first base; Smith or Huston, second base; Creamer, shortstop; Hyman or Stiles, third base; Short, McCoy and Thompson in the outfield.

Howard Thompson, Central High School's flashy sophomore athlete, captains the local club and requests that all players report at Huston's billiard parlor at 1:15 p. m. Sunday, prior to going to the park.

IS SCHMELING NEW CHAMPION? JURY UNABLE TO REACH VERDICT

By DAVIS J. WALSH
I. N. S. Sports Editor

NEW YORK, June 14.—Thirty-six hours after the first million-dollar foul in all the history of boxing had been committed, the jury still was out this morning trying to reach a verdict on the question of whether Max Schmeling is awarded undisputed possession of the heavyweight title or undisputed possession of the air. It is a headstrong jury. In the opinion of William Muldoon, in fact, his story is that eleven very stubborn jurors are liable to try a man's patience out of all reason.

Anyhow, Mr. Muldoon, who seems to feel that he would be violating his best traditions if he ever agreed with anybody on anything, has decided that everybody was guilty of a childish oversight on Thursday evening. He thinks the wrong man won the prize fight.

He, therefore, has arranged to take a unanimous one-man vote on the matter and thus straighten everyone out. By the time he gets through doing this, Max Adolph O. to Schmeling will have defended and probably lost the title. He was awarded on a foul by Jack Sharkey in the fourth round the other night. In other words, it would seem that Mr. Muldoon has managed to overmatch himself at last.

He can decree that men must stop smoking because he doesn't like smoking but he can't order them to stop thinking. For instance, did Schmeling lose the prize fight? He didn't. Did he win the prize fight? He did. Was the prize fight? By the arrangement of his own boxing commission, to be fought for the heavyweight championship? It was. This is second reader stuff. By following its continuity, you arrive at the inevitable conclusion that Schmeling is the heavyweight champion because he won the prize fight that was fought for the heavyweight championship.

Of course, Sharkey had no title to win or lose but, except for this point, the foul incident parallels others in which a championship title was involved. Willie Ritchie might never have been lightweight champion if he had refused to recognize his right to crumple under Volga's foul. What of the famous Nelson-Gans foul at Goldfield? Was that a championship fight or am I just naturally mistaken? Jack Fields, the present welterweight champion, was fouled into his title by Dundee. These items in the bill of particulars, as a matter of fact, are too numerous to mention.

The New York commission does many strange things. It agrees to waive its own foul rules in the contract for this fight, thus inviting one and all to ignore these rules in the future. It allows Schmeling, supposed to be persona non grata, to dictate the terms of his particular clause, because he claimed that Sharkey might simulate a foul from a punch in the body. Yet it knew or should have known that Schmeling and body punching are as the poles apart.

But if it doesn't stand behind the verdict of its own officials, it will be laughed out of countenance by California, Illinois and the N. B. A. all of which agreed to help it to stand behind this verdict. These organizations are obligated to accept Schmeling, the New York commission can do no less.

Meantime, we have a new champion and the perennial challenger, neither of whom are men to inspire great confidence. Sharkey will never be as good as he was the other night. If he fights Schmeling again, it will be as a man who reached and has passed the pinnacle. He achieved perfection for three of the four rounds the other night and still lost. Offhand, I would say that that kind is hopeless.

As for Schmeling, he struck me as a fighter who, in winning on the negative impetus of a foul, wasn't as good as he was a year ago. His right, it seems, has lost some of its authority. It certainly has lost its brevity and snap. His left still is highly unimportant.

And if he stays out of circulation until next June, as announced, he won't be as good as he was on Thursday night. He can't stay out of competition without suffering accordingly. He is in the unique position of having much to learn about a profession of which he is the admitted king and ruler. You can't learn swimming in a beach chair.

Dr. J. I. Falconer in a meeting of county co-operative leaders at the Court House Friday evening, discussing the American Institute of Co-operation said the Institute is a conference body of farmers' co-operative business organizations doing a business of $2,500,000 annually with the products of 2,000, 600 farmers.

Dr. Falconer, who is head of the rural economics department of Ohio State University, is also program chairman of the institute, which will be held at Ohio State University July 7-12. At this institute problems common to all co-operatives are discussed and national policies formulated. The institute, of which this is the sixth, is financed one half by co-operative groups and one half by the Russell Sage Foundation. L. B. Palmer, president of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation, is president and Chas. W. Holman, Washington, D. C., is secretary.

No charge is made for those attending the institute and comfortable rooms can be obtained at the University dormitories for fifty cents per night. The Ohio State Fair Grounds has also been thrown open for free camping. Plans are made to accommodate the 2,000 co-operative leaders from the four corners of the country who will attend.

The morning session will consist of an expository and analytical address by a national authority on membership relations, financing and other national problems of co-operatives. Ample time will be provided for discussion. The afternoons will be more informal and will be divided into the major commodity groups such as livestock, wool, grain, etc. Several night sessions will be held. Members of the Federal Farm Board will address those in attendance and be in conference with various commodity groups. Programs for the institute are now available and can be obtained from County Attendance Chairman E. A. Drake.

CARROLL-BINDERS BEAT WASHINGTON

After fighting an uphill battle almost all the way, the Carroll-Binder Co. softball team of the Xenia National League rallied in the closing innings to nose out the Reeder Printers of Washington C. H. 7 to 6 in an exhibition game Friday night on the Hoover and Allison Co. diamond.

The local nine trailed from the start but hit its stride in the last two rounds and achieved a narrow victory that squared accounts with the Printers, who had trounced Carroll-Binder, 6 to 3 last week at Washington C. H.

THE STORY OF A GIRL WHO DESERVED TO WIN

READ THIS FIRST:

Clara Dee Forester is the pampered, motherless daughter of a millionaire, who is so disgusted with the wealthy young that he leaves his daughter one dollar at his death, hoping that some quality in her will make her a successful woman. She goes to Mrs. Flynn's boarding house to live, and there meets Winfield Baxter, a young chemist. Also Estelle Kay, who persuades her to model for the famous artist Ivan Moreau. Both men fall in love with her. Estelle becomes jealous of Ivan and leaves the city with a mysterious threat. Clara Dee is invited to the studio for dinner New Year's Eve, but Estelle comes first to see Ivan, begs him to marry her, and is sent away angry.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXV

She turned the white square of pasteboard over twice, surprised to find none of the conventional phrases that admirers are supposed to write when sending flowers or valuable gifts to beautiful girls: "If it's yes, wear these"—"To my only beloved," were what they usually wrote.

Clever Ivan Moreau—it was not his policy to leave incriminating evidence strewn about in the form of amorous notes. He preferred to voice his endearments by word of mouth. He would be out of the city for a week, so Clara Dee was going to be free to rest and enjoy herself.

Not being able to decide whether she was happily grateful for such a gift, or if she should refuse to accept it at all, she returned the jewels to their case, hung the coral gown back in the wardrobe and went down to the kitchen where she found Mrs. Flynn engaged in the task of stuffing a large turkey. She had been so delighted with the coffee urn and the many other remembrances from her flock, that she was determined to give to all those who had not "gone back home for Christmas," or been invited out, a genuine Yuletide dinner.

Like many kindly, generous souls, her heart and spirit were gold; but the gold in her purse was most often silver and worn bills of the lowest denominations. Nothing made her happier nor afforded her more pleasure than to prepare, without economy, a real old-fashioned holiday dinner and share it with any who were unfortunate enough to have no home. So she had brought out her faded, yellowed cook books with the recipes which mentioned pounds in stead of "one-half cups," "eggless, butterless," etc., and the old New England traditions with which she had been reared, after having come as a small child to this land of opportunity. There were oysters in the dressing, capers in the brown gilet gravy, candied citron and orange peel in the mammoth iced fruit cake which had been baked a month ago and properly seasoned in waxed paper and linen cloth, plums in the pudding and brandy in the sauce. She gloried in her task.

"Merry Christmas, Mother Flynn," sang Clara Dee.

"And the same to you," she responded in her soft brogue.

Clara Dee turned back her sleeves, pinned a towel about her and announced, "Now you are going to say I may help you. I never dreamed there was so much to do to prepare a Christmas dinner, but I must be fun, too."

"Indeed, you can be helpin' me." She rinsed her hands at the faucet and set out the ingredients for the pudding. "Thar now, I reckon you kin put thim together ivery bit as good as meself, while I git this here bird on to roast. Pervidin' y' tell the others who made it, ef it does be turnin' out wrong," she chuckled heartily.

Clara Dee laughed and agreed to her terms and hummed a snatch of an old Christmas carol while she measured and beat, smeared her face with flour, nibbled at the delicacies which stood about everywhere and sniffed at the delicious odors which escaped from the oven every time the turkey was basted.

Mrs. Flynn's round, heat-flushed face beamed from behind the shining coffee urn at the head of the one table, which seated all who were left of the lodgers, like a benevolent saint. She served them, for once, all they could eat of food which was ample proof of her culinary ability, even though many of the meals she had provided them through forced economy, were contradictory of such culinary skill. She was shrewd enough to note that the leftovers, when properly treated, would provide the evening lunch and part of next day's dinner.

Clara Dee spent part of the long afternoon in Win's laboratory copying strange characters from his scratch pad into the neatly kept note books in their orderly stacks.

He had complained that he detested keeping his note books in copied order and was so much more interested just now in the experiments, themselves, having reached some very important stages in his work—and she had eagerly offered to help him. Her study and training had given her a confidence in her ability which she had never before experienced and she was eager to test that ability with real responsibility.

"I shall be at liberty to help you all week," she promised. "Mr. Moreau is out of the city and I'll be only too happy to have something interesting to do." He consented readily enough and at once became absorbed with his apparatus, while she bent her black head over his conglomeration of notes, jotted down hastily and briefly. She understood very little of it, but the mysterious importance of those characters thrilled and fascinated her.

The big, quiet room flooded with pale winter sunlight, which glistened on the rows of iceles hanging from the window ledges outside, the silliness broken by the steady scratching of her pen and the tinkle of test tubes against bottles was balm to her tired nerves and jumbled thoughts of many weeks. How peaceful and—homelike it seemed, to be working with Winfield and his ambition. She had never felt herself so a part of Ivan's work during the many weeks she had worked with him.

"I wish you were successful enough to need a secretary all the time and I could work for you," she remarked soberly, when they had stopped work for the day.

"Perhaps I shall, soon," he replied with enthusiasm. "Would—er—would you prefer that to the kind of work you are doing at present?"

"Oh! yes, indeed. As a matter of fact, I don't expect to work for Mr. Moreau much longer. I am looking for something else, where I can progress. Business appeals to me most."

She was about to confide in him about her business training—then decided to keep it as a surprise until she should receive her diploma. He had once said that she could be successful—well, she'd show him she was no parasite. It had never occurred to him to ask her how she had learned to transcribe his notes. How like a man! They always took a woman's ability for granted—only noted her lack of capability.

Neither did she mention Ivan's gift. She felt quite sure that he would not approve of her accepting it, because, she reasoned, he was not accustomed to spending such sums of money as was Ivan, and he could not possibly understand the fascination which jewels held for her.

She crept into bed after a busy cozy, friendly Christmas Day, and decided that it had been the merriest Christmas of her life, although she had no home, no family, few friends and was not even essential to anyone's life. Well—perhaps, at least she hoped that she might be of just a little importance to one life.

The greater part of her vacation week she spent on her studies and rented a typewriter on which to practice, in order to increase her speed. She completed the copying of Winfield's notes, spent two mornings shopping, availing herself of some of the opportunities offered by post-holiday sales, assisted and chatted with Mrs. Flynn and, on the whole, spent a very busy, happy week. On Monday came a note from Ivan. It read:

"You will surely allow me the honor and pleasure of celebrating New Year's Eve with me? I am anticipating the joy of having you for my guest at dinner at the studio. Just a small party. Affectionately—Van."

Clara Dee considered her reply for a whole day. She could find no objection nor good reason for refusing the invitation, yet she did not experience the pleasant anticipation in accepting, that had tingled to her very fingertips when she had promised to be Winfield's guest on Christmas Eve. It was only fair to Van, to dine with him on New Year's Eve, when she had refused him in preference to Winfield a week ago. The thing which most influenced her decision to accept Ivan's invitation was that she said nothing of, nor had heard a word from Winfield all that day.

She decided that because she had finished his work for him and he had no further need for her, he had no desire for her society. Petty, yes—but people do many strange things when in love. Besides there was no need to excite Ivan's disapproval just now, when a few weeks more would find her independent; and in the meantime, she needed the income until she found another position.

She sent a note of acceptance to Ivan, by messenger, and spent the afternoon making herself more lovely for the occasion. She wore the new coral gown, and after considerable hesitation and deliberation, slipped the cool, gleaming strand of pearls about her throat. They were just too beautiful to ignore. She made a stunning picture she knew, although her mirror afforded her only a glimpse of her head and shoulders. She slipped out without leaving word for anyone, called a cab and gave the driver the studio address.

But another caller arrived ahead of her: an unbidden and unexpected guest.

GOLD STAR MOTHER GRATEFUL

Mrs. Lydia Charlton Pleased At Pilgrimage To Grave Of Son In France

THE one Xenia Gold Star mother who left five weeks ago on the pilgrimage to the grave of her son who lost his life overseas during the World War, returned home this week expressing gratitude for the care taken of the grave of "her boy" in the Meuse-Ar-gonne Cemetery in France.

Mrs. Lydia A. Charlton, 68, 448 S. Monroe St., arrived home last Sunday from France where she visited the grave of her son, Private Charles L. Charlton. She spent five days at Verdun, where she and members of her party were free to visit the cemeteries every day.

MRS. CHARLTON

"Everybody wept. Even the bus drivers cried with the mothers and the officers who conducted the trip," Mrs. Charlton said in describing the scene when the party arrived at the cemeteries.

Declaring that she experienced no trouble finding the marble cross marking the grave of her son, Mrs. Charlton said the mothers were pleased to find their boys resting in such beautiful cemeteries.

She said that every possible courtesy was shown the mothers and that the cemeteries were kept in splendid condition. Deep and sincere appreciation of the opportunity to visit the graves of their sons was expressed.

"We were delighted to return to the United States," said Mrs. Charlton, who declared that even though the trip was wonderful she would not care to make the long pilgrimage again.

Mrs. Charlton was away for nearly five weeks. The contingent of which she was a member made the trip across on the liner American. Mrs. Charlton returned on the liner President Harding, arriving in the New York harbor Thursday night last week.

BRINGING UP FATHER

The Theater

The recent "graduation exercises" marking the close of the Broadway theatrical season, the annual revival by the Players' Club, this time that pre-war opus "Milestones" by Arnold Bennett and Edward Knobloch, suggests a similar festival by the great of Hollywood.

This cooperative artistic effort by the eastern luminaries is always an intelligent and brilliant exhibition but this year's bugle call found most of Broadway's leading modern artists busily engaged on the golden lots and platinum interiors of Hollywood.

Criticism of a similar effort by film great is based on the claim that economic fraction would result among rival producing units, but this is answered by the fact usual airplane elopement which seems to appeal so strongly to the bazaar taste of many of the film luminaries.

Both Ben and his bride have been working, Bebe especially so, as the talkies greatly increased her popularity. She has been starring in the RKO picture "Lawful Larceny" in which Lowell Sherman plays opposite her in the role he created several years ago in the original stage play. He is also doing the directing and Kenneth Thompson, Olive Tell and Purnell B. Pratt are in feature roles. This column wishes Bebe and her b. f. long life and happiness.

A handsome reception to Charles H. Newton, department commander, and his staff by the W. R. C. at the Court House formally opened the G. A. R. Encampment program.

Beautiful beyond expectations was the auto parade Tuesday. There were seventy-five gayly decorated cars in the pageant.

Mrs. Ella Nisonger, who has been traveling in the interest of Dr. Lyon's goods for several weeks, is home this week.

A large portion of the credit for the success of the 44th annual encampment of the G. A. R. is due to J. F. Orr, who with untiring patience has directed the work of the many committees.

hat the actors and actresses who assemble for the annual Players' revival are also under contract to different producing managers. Furthermore the movie producers have pioneered in loaning stars from one company to another.

Joseph Schildkraut and his recently detached wife furnish the attraction for this column today. Mr. Schildkraut, the former Elsie Bartlett, as recently reported in his column, has succeeded in severing the matrimonial bonds that held her to the screen player.

If memory serves us correctly today is the wedding day for Bebe Daniels and Ben Lyon. And such a wedding day. For years Bebe has hovered lightly near the top of the ranks of popular movie stars, successfully repulsing the advances and blandishments of Cupid. Lyon also is a bachelor. For several years these two have been "going together." Bebe said it was to they would be sure that they were fond enough of each other to perpetrate marriage.

This alone is a revolutionary, almost an alien viewpoint, in Hollywood, where stars fall in love over night, are married in Mexico the next day and are divorced a few months later, only to wed again. Bebe and Ben seem to have old-fashioned ideas about the nuptial state. Bebe also insisted on a church wedding instead of the

AUTO STOLEN HERE USED IN ATTEMPTED HOLD-UP IS LEARNED

Three young men riding in a Buick coach later identified as having been stolen from E. D. Martin, N. Galloway St., held up and robbed Deway Ackerman, deputy in the Greene County surveyor's office, of a package of cigarettes on the Xenia-Cedarville Pike, a mile from Cedarville at 1 a. m. Thursday, Ackerman revealed Friday.

Ackerman was driving alone toward Xenia when his car was overtaken by the machine occupied by the three youths, one of whom flourished a revolver and at the point of his gun forced the Xenian to stop.

Just as the highwaymen began to search his pockets another auto approached along the road and the bandit trio fled. The youths made such a hasty exit from Ackerman's machine that a door was torn from its hinges.

As the hold-up trio drove away, Ackerman observed the license number on the bandit auto and later traced the ownership to E. D. Martin.

Martin's machine was stolen from his garage without his knowledge sometime Wednesday afternoon and was found abandoned near Clifton Thursday.

Ackerman described the three bandits as being between 20 and 25 years of age. He said they were unmasked but that they wore top coats with the collars turned up and hats pulled down on their foreheads to conceal their features as much as possible.

Star Gazing BY RADIE HARRIS

Central Press Staff Writer
Real name is Frederick Bickel. Adopted family name of Marcher for professional purposes. Later changed to Frederick March because, according to numerology, his lucky number is twelve. Called "Freddie" by everyone—except his wife. She calls him "Lammie."
Born in Racine, Wis., August 31, 1897. Doesn't look a day older than 35.

Always wanted to be an actor but never told anyone about it—not even his diary.
Chose Banking
Specialized in banking at the University of Wisconsin and won scholarship to the National City Bank of New York City. Proved excellent apprenticeship to screen career. Knows the difference now between movie money and real money.

Decided he would rather starve as an actor than stifle as a bank president, so resigned his job. No one tendered him a farewell dinner.

Registered at a screen casting agency. Was sent to David Belasco in response to a call for extras in the stage production, "Deburau." Doubled as Victor Hugo in the prologue and "an old man" in the second act. Had a line to speak—"the rope gave way." To this day, whenever Belasco meets him hails him as "Old Rope Gave Way."

Considers his stock engagement at the Elitch Gardens in Denver, the nicest of his career. Was there he met Florence Eldridge, the present Mrs. Frederick March.

Won to Screen
Was playing role of "Tony Cavendish" in the coast production of "The Royal Family" when he was won over to screen contract by Paramount. Will soon play same role in talkie version.

Always poses with a pipe or the latest brand of cigarettes but agrees with Thomas Marshall that what this country needs is a good five-cent cigar.

Hates New York traffic, highly efficient efficiency, doting out what to pack in a week end case, a "loud" wardrobe and bromides (seltzer and otherwise.)

Plays a corking set of tennis but his feminine partners invariably score a "love" game.
Dislikes bridge. Considers it leads to unhappy home life. Will play anagrams and parchesi with and without the slightest provocation.

Has but one superstition. Keeps a tiny pair of his wife's baby gloves in his dressing room all the time as a good luck symbol. She reciprocates by keeping his baby surra in hers.

Admires Maurice Chevalier immensely. Nancy Carroll is his favorite actress. Will play opposite her for the first time in his next picture.

Was so disappointed when he lost the title role in "Young Man of Manhattan" after having been assigned it, that he wanted to go out and break the ten Commandments, including the eighth amendment. Recovered quickly playing with Claudette Colbert in "Manslaughter."

Is never taken for an actor off the screen. Which explains why he is so quickly recognized as one on the screen.

SCHOONER RECOVERS BODIES OF SEA CRASH VICTIMS

With the death toll at forty-six and twenty-five persons seriously burned, serious charges have been made against the members of the crew of the Fairfax at three investigations begun at Boston into the crash of that steamer and the oil tanker Pinthis. This unusual photo shows some of the fire-scarred bodies of the victims on the deck of a Boston fire boat where they were transferred from a fishing schooner after the latter had recovered bodies of the passengers and crew who jumped into the sea to escape the flames. Inset shows Sergeant and Mrs. A. E. Abbott of the Boston marine barracks, two survivors of the disaster.

Sickened at the "bestiality" of it all, and discouraged, he made his way back to Siberia, where he was to be caught in the famous anabasis of the Czechs, from whom he had his narrow escape. They were death on Magyars, whether prisoners or not, and they are the one

A BOLD WANDERER AND HIS EPIC TALE
Or How an Artist and His Art Survived a Revolution
By HARRY DOUNCE

An overworked word is demanded by Ferenc Imrey's "Through Blood and Ice." The experience which it recounts is an Odyssey, if ever there was one. It begins with Mr. Imrey's call to the Austro-Hungarian colors at the outbreak of the war, which found him, a young artist fresh from study in Paris and a well-loved fellowship on Montmartre, teaching drawing in the technical school of applied art in Budapest. It ends with his exit to Japan from the long, chaotic Siberian nightmare of civil strife and brigandage which followed the Russian revolutions. He seems to have reached Yokohama in 1920; meanwhile, during most of the five years and more between, he had been a prisoner of war in Siberia.

As such, even while the Czar kept his throne, although there was no escaping, an active man of spirit could move about a good deal, taking advantage of the ramshackle arrangements of the Russian gaoles. Mr. Imrey did so; later, in the internecine confusion, he became a bold wanderer, seeking a way out of Asia, east or west. It would be hard to think of an important development along the Siberian railway that he did not witness, or short of death, an adventure possible to a prisoner that he did not have. For the first two years his base was the camp at Achinsk, on the northernmost stretch of the railway. When the life there galled him, he volunteered for labor "in the west," nearer civilization—and found himself consigned to one of the Czar's private gold mines; that was worse than the camp, and he soon took French leave and went back.

Again the monotony and the hardships—on which, by the way, he touches so sparingly and composedly that you almost forget them: "Russian brutality and negligence, starvation coupled with the rigors of the harsh climate, sweeping epidemics of typhus and other diseases"—grew intolerable, and he joined in a mad plan to escape by building a boat of green wood and dropping down a river to the Arctic Ocean. He was somehow prevented from taking part in the attempt, which came to an inglorious end in a Tartar village but his complicity was known, and he faced a drunken military court and paid a share of the penalty.

But it is after the Czar's fall in 1917 that his recital takes on its most distinctive interest and grows, as if in spite of him, not only more absorbing but harrowing. He was in Achinsk at the time of the March revolution, and made the acquaintance of an old lady whose name meant nothing to him, it was Breshkovskaya—Babushka in her brief hour of rapture. He was in the great prison camp at Beresovka when a backwash of hell from the Red revolution came surging across Siberia trainloads of insensate Russian front-line veterans, ravaging, plundering, beleaguering the prisoners of war. This backwash had its counter-revolutionary successors, and by spring their maelstrom drove him to a desperate effort to work westward from Irkutsk into Europe. He got as far as Moscow, just in time for the worst fighting there; he saw a bearded commissar in the thick of it popping away effectively with revolvers—Trotzky, or so he was told.

item of his experiences against which he retains any feeling of bitterness.

From first to last he managed to work at his art. At the end, he very quietly gives thanks for it. In his own case, the glimpses of this persistence that you get are inspiring. His right hand is riddled and infected; he will not let his captors' surgeons amputate it and no sooner is he in Petrograd, convalescent than he is sketching to recover the use of it. Entrained for Siberia, he amuses himself and picks up a little money by making portrait sketches of his guards. At Achinsk he falls to modeling busts of black bread. Touched up with "a bit of color that I managed to find" these sell, and he can buy a few luxuries for his messmates, as well as paints and paper. Always there is practical work for him. Sometimes it is the painting of scenery for a theater. Once it is a venerated share in the restoring of a church.

And the reader who happens to know will find it difficult to remember that the man who thus adapts himself, for years on end, to the torments of Siberian existence in peculiarly grinding and perilous circumstances is by no means a mere graphic artisan, but is a poet of the brush, painting largely from imagination and devoted to symbolism! There will be, however, no difficulty in discovering and bearing in mind a fact about him of which he seems entirely unconscious—namely, that he is as decent and "sporting" and unassuming and generally engaging a human being as has ever told an epic true tale with himself as hero.
